Hi Alyson-

Thanks for keeping me informed. I've also heard back from the Holyoke ADA and this is what he stated: " I wish I could give you an estimate as to what will happen monday. The defendant blew off the motion to supress hearing...my guess is that if she does show up she will likely plea, but I cannot promise you that." So my best guess is that I will not be needed in Holyoke on Monday, and should be available whenever you need me (though I must warn you that I am on call for a Superior Court case (in Springfield) on Monday and Tuesday - the ADA doesn't think she'll need me until Tuesday, but I also just found out that my Westfield DC trial on Tuesday is a definite (it is the only trial scheduled and the defendant is representing himself), so she may try to squeeze me in late on Monday). Hope this helps.

-Sonja

Hi Sonja-

As of today, the case is still scheduled for trial and I anticipate that it may be a trial (depending of course on the availability of judges). I'll keep you updated on Monday though and thanks for the heads up about Holyoke.

Hi Alyson-

I'm just checking in to find out about the status of the [REDACTED] case scheduled for trial on Monday, October 18, 2010, and to let you know that I am also on call for a case in Holyoke that day (I have emailed the ADA to find out what is going on with his case (as well as to find out the drug lab number(s)) and am waiting his reply).
